This Faculty Seminar Roundtable will explore the digital future for humanities research. Alice Daer (English), will explore why humanists need to be doing more internet research. Volker Benkert, Lauren McArthur Harris, Jason Bruner and Marcie Hutchinson (School of Historical, Philosophical and Religious Studies) will explore how digital humanities involve the public in shaping historical research and designing an Arizona Comparative Genocide Museum.

Finally, Kristin Koptiuch (School of Social and Behavioral Sciences) will argue that humanities scholars must hijack powerful digital technologies, repurposing them by employing the full interpretive strength and creativity of our critical poetic imagination.
